Introduction

The first set of results from the 2021 Census show that the total population for Bradford District is 546,400. This is an increase of 4,300 since the mid-2020 population estimates were published in June 2021 and an increase of 23,950 people since the 2011 Census.

Population breakdown

A large part of Bradford's population is dominated by the younger age groups. The population under the age of 15 forms 21.4% of the District's population. This is the fourth highest percentage in England after the London Borough of Barking and Dagenham, Slough Borough Council and Luton Borough Council and the largest percentage in the region.

63.4% of the District's population is aged between 15 and 64 and 15.2% is aged 65 and over.

Since the last census in 2011 there has been an increase of nearly two percentage points in the number of people aged 65 and over and a decrease in the percentage of young and working age people.

Bradford compared with other local authorities

Bradford is the fifth largest local authority in England in terms of population (after Birmingham, Leeds, Sheffield and Manchester).

Households

Bradford has a total of 209,900 households, an increase of 10,604 (5.3%) since the 2011 Census. The District has a population density of 1,491 people per sq km – this is an increase of 63 people per sq km since the 2011 Census and the highest rate in West Yorkshire.

The first set of results from the 2021 Census of England and Wales were published on 28th June 2022. The data is available at District level and above and comprises the total population by sex and five-year age bands, the total number of households and population density.

ONS will be publishing other main data from the Census within two years of the Census data. This will also become available at Ward, LSOA and MSOA level. On-the-day alerts and briefing notes will be produced as soon as the information at these levels becomes available
